

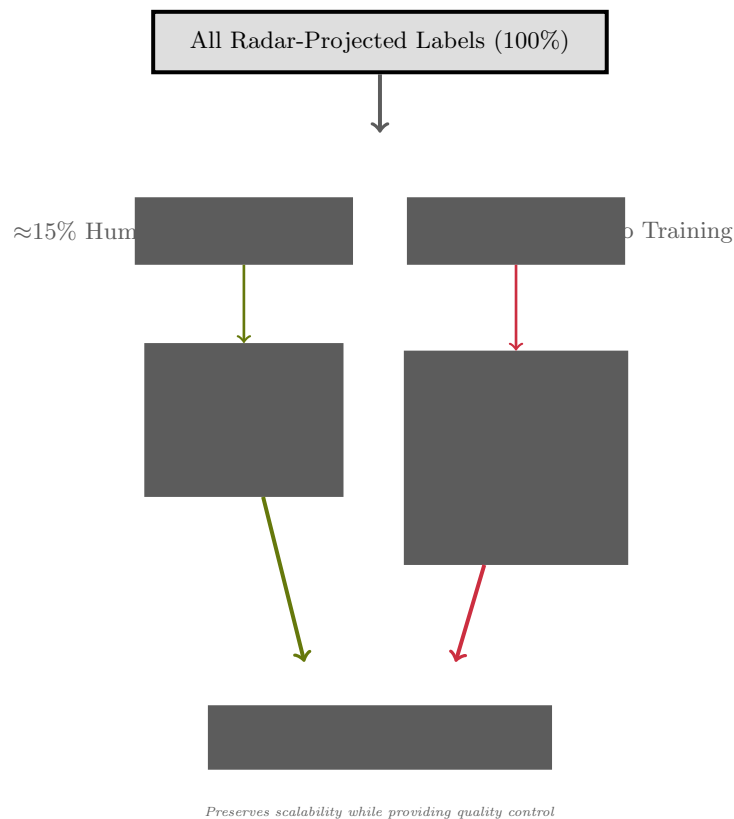

Figure 1: Active learning for selective verification of radar-projected labels. High-confidence labels (stable tracks, moderate range, consistent sizing) proceed directly to training, while uncertain labels (edge-of-FOV, single-scan, extreme range, high disagreement) are routed for human verification, preserving scalability while maintaining quality.